OVERVIEW

The Certificate Program in Holocaust & Genocide Education: History & Pedagogy provides intensive training in Holocaust history and sound pedagogical methods and strategies for teaching about the Holocaust.

The program also introduces participants to specific examples of genocide and the warning signs that have emerged over time. Participants will utilize reputable archives and primary source materials that promote the skills of historical inquiry.

This program will assist teachers to effectively meet state and national educational standards, including the new MN standards in Holocaust and genocide education.

PROGRAM MODEL

The program's design is based on extensive research about contemporary Holocaust education as well as decades of real-world experience in the field of professional teacher training in the United States and internationally. Based on this background research, our program focuses on Pedagogy and a back-to-the-basics approach to examine history, providing concise yet thorough historical content and context.

Pedagogy: This program will cover how theories and methods for teaching about the Holocaust have changed over time, including the development of an entire field of pedagogical research dedicated to teaching about difficult histories and traumatic topics. Our program incorporates the USHMM Guidelines for Teaching about the Holocaust, introduces best practices, and assists teachers in writing their rationale while providing tools to effectively select classroom resources that are historically accurate and age appropriate.

History: These sessions and our online resource library focus on the power of historical thinking and the value of interpreting history from primary sources. Participants will spend time delving deeper into the history of the Holocaust era, raising questions about possible gaps in our own historical knowledge, and discussing ways to ensure historical accuracy for and with our student learners.

CERTIFICATE

Upon completion, this program will undergo several forms of evaluation, and will provide Certification and Continuing Education Units (CEUs).
